

Disc & Music Echo

December 19, 1970

BADFINGER: "No Dice"

Peter Vance

BADFINGER are one of Apple's natural phenomena who continues to disturbingly sound like the early Beatles. I say "disturbingly" only because the comparison is almost indecent and it becomes harder and harder each time I hear them as a separate Badfinger entity. Still, if you accidentally manage to sound like the Beatles it can't be bad and on this album Badfinger have extended and charged up their lead guitar and rhythm work so they sound a lot stronger overall than they did on their early album. A lot of the innate, wispy, McCartney-type gentleness has now gone although the quality part of their sound is left.