

Sounds

January 15, 1972

BADFINGER: “Day After Day”

Unknown

After what seems like years, Badfinger – remember the Beatles signed them to their label, remember the Beatles? – come back with a new single written by Pete Ham who has lost none of that McCartney quality about his voice. Melodically like “Going Back” at the beginning of the verses, it has a nice uncluttered commercial strength about it. A simple kind of immediacy and some Harrison-oriented guitar work on the middle break. Funny how they originally actually lost out because they accidentally sounded like the Beatles, maybe now all that fuss is over they’ll be able to get on with it.